HER TALENT.

She does not pride of Browning
Whose works I have not read.
There is no laurel crowning
Her shapely little head.
She is not named in Schiller
And Goethe and the rest;
She has no score of "allies,"
As some, perchance, have guessed.
She knows no word of Dante
And his Italian crew;
She plays not "penny ante"
As rapid maidens do.
She more she knows of Schiller
Than of La Rochefoucauld
On Darwin she is dumber
Than any girl I know.
With Kant and Schopenhauer
Her speech she will not load,
But verse she loves to ponder
Though still she is a dumber
Than any girl I know.
As she will readily state,
Yet still I want to know her—
Her paragon I am not.
—Harry B. Smith, in America.

THE WHITE DEVIL.

A Mexican Superstition and Its Interesting Origin.

One day as the freight train running from San Francisco to San Jose rumbled around the curve just outside of the city of San Jose, a white horse sprang on the track and raced down toward the town in front of the engine. For a mile the horse did not gain on him, then the unequal footing of the cross ties and the pace began to tell on the white steed, and the engine swept slowly up to him. The engineer gave a few shrieks of the whistle to scare the horse from the track, but he kept right on in front, running with the speed of a racer, with his long tail streaming in a straight line behind him. The engineer saw a stock gap in front half a mile away, and again pulled the whistle. The horse simply let out a few links and went on. The engineer got mad. He pulled the throttle open and went after the white phantom, at a thirty-miles-an-hour clip. He was a bare hundred feet behind the horse when the animal reared the stock gap and plunged in among the open ties and rails. The pilot struck him, ground the life out of him in an instant and then plowed into the dirt on the opposite side of the track. The engineer swore a few choice oaths and jumped out of the cab. The horse was as dead as a door nail and the engine had left the rails.

"Another 'cut for the company,'" said the conductor as he came up. "How did you do it, Jim?" "Oh, I don't know," answered Jim in a surly way. "The brute got on the track and just stayed there till I struck him. He was possessed of the devil, I guess." They had to send to San Jose for the wrecking engine to put the train back on the rail, and while they were waiting a Mexican rode along the road beside the track. He pulled up his broncho to see the wreck.

"Caramba, senior," he exclaimed, turning pale and trembling, "it is Vasquez's horse." And he mounted his pony as quickly as possible and sped off down the road. "Who the deuce is Vasquez?" asked Jim. "From the way that dresser got a peach on himself, you'd think we'd killed a ghost." "If that's Vasquez's horse as the dresser said, you have killed a Mexican ghost," said the conductor, and he walked over and looked at the dead animal lying under the front wheels of the engine.

It was Vasquez's horse. The whole country knew it the next day. He was twenty years old and totally blind when he met his death in front of the freight train, and for ten years had roamed over the unoccupied land about the lower part of Santa Clara county free as a bird and feared by the Mexicans more than a lion. He was called by them the "white devil," and it was their belief that he was possessed of a soul mortgaged to the evil one—the soul of Vasquez. It is a strange tale that the old Mexican mothers tell of this white horse.

Vasquez was the most noted bandit of the early days of California. He bade defiance to the law, eluded the detectives and searching parties for years and killed and robbed half a hundred men. He roamed over the state of California from the north to the south, leaving desolation and death in his wake. He surrounded himself with a band of desperate Mexicans and terrorized entire communities. Lone travelers by day and by night were stopped on the road and relieved of their cash and often of their lives. A quiet village in the San Joaquin valley would be awakened at the dead of night by the rush of sounding hoof-beats. Timid men would pull the covers about their heads and shiver. Next day the principal store in the place would be found open, the safe robbed, valuable goods taken, and the guardian, if it had any, dead with a bullet in his head or a knife wound in his heart. Vasquez had been there.

Two horsemen dressed in the tinselled Mexican cavalier costume rounded a turn in the road just in front of the stage and came riding toward it. One of them bestrode a white horse. They entered upon the stage. The man on the white horse went to the right and his companion to the left of the stage. Suddenly they reined up.

"Pardon, senior, will the senior give me a light for my cigarette?" The driver good-naturedly pulled up and leaned over from his seat with the big cigar which he was smoking extended between his fingers. He was met with a snap shot straight in the brain and tumbled headlong into the dust. At the same instant the guard leaped and fell forward under the horses with a ball in his forehead. A dozen men sprang from the underbrush beside the road and shoved the muzzles of their rifles through the stage door on either side.

Taken by surprise, not a weapon was drawn by the guards. The strong box was lifted from the boot, the men inside were disarmed while the robbers' rifles stared them in the eyes, and the merry company, with many jokes about the dresses they would buy for their señoritas, mounted the horses that were led out of the woods and rode away, he on the white steed humming a bit of some old Spanish love song to the tune of his horse's step.

It was a dreamy August afternoon in Southern California when the mayor of Los Angeles and a fellow official were driving along the old sand road through the Arroyo Seco toward the town. Over the brow of a hill half a mile in front of them a group of horsemen appeared at a gallop. They swept down the hill and met the buggy of the mayor. The galloping horses were yanked back upon their haunches and a swarthy Mexican upon a white horse shoved a pistol in the mayor's face and said, with a show of his teeth in a smile: "Your money, senior."

The mayor thought it was a joke and laughed. "Quick! quick!" said the horseman, as his weapon clicked. "I am Vasquez." The mayor laughed again. "Eef you don't believe me, senior, look."

He pointed back to the hill, and there appeared another group of horsemen riding at full tilt from the town. "Quick!" said Vasquez. "I am no fool." The mayor looked down the pistol barrel at the pair of black, glittering eyes that lined the sights, and put up his hands. He was lightened of his chamotea bag of gold, as was his friend, and the bold robbers wheeled and were off at a run, the posse from the town riding up five minutes too late to catch them or to save the mayor's coin. The band escaped into the chapparal.

Vasquez made history in this way for five years and then was caught like a rat in a trap in a "dobe house" near the scene of the robbery of the mayor, and was shot down by a newspaper correspondent detailed to accompany the search party. He survived his wounds, was taken to San Jose, where one of his earliest and most atrocious murders had been committed, and there met his fate on the scaffold.

And now for the horse. Every time the robbers appeared one of them, the leader, would be mounted upon a white horse. That he had a world of speed was shown in the way that he would gallop away from the rest of the gang when they were pursued. The horse was hitched behind the house when Vasquez was shot. One of the capturing party tried to take him and was severely bitten for his cupidity. The horse broke away, went careering off toward the canyon where Vasquez had ad his rendezvous and was lost to sight. Most people say he died in the mountains of starvation, but the Mexicans say no. They saw him again.

The night after Vasquez was hanged a white horse galloped up the street to the jail, stood a moment at the door and gave a neigh. The Mexicans leaped in it a call to the dead Vasquez. There came no answer to the horse's challenge and he wheeled about and went as suddenly as he came. Then he turned bandit and followed Vasquez' old trail. Once in awhile a man would be found on the road with his body frightfully mutilated and his flesh bearing the marks of hoofs. Sometimes in the night a white horse would appear at the door of a Mexican cabin in some lonely spot and neigh. If no answer came he would be off like the wind, but if any man dared to show himself the horse would attack him with hoof and teeth and it was seldom that a victim escaped.

Time and again he was shot at, and one Mexican broke him foolishly enough to try to rope him and met a horrible death. The horse bore a charmed life. He became almost as great a terror to the Mexicans as Vasquez had been to the rich Americans. If by chance a Mexican's pony got out of the corral and wandered off in search of grass the white horse would find him and enlist him. First he had one follower, then two, then half a dozen. No man could kill them and no man dared to attempt to capture them. With no loads upon their backs they were fleet as the wind and could outstrip the best horse with a rider. The Mexicans named the leader the "White Devil," and said that Vasquez lived again in his horse.

As the years went by and Vasquez became a memory, and his exploits the theme for children's stories, the White Devil lost his companions. He visits to the vicinity of the little towns became less and less frequent and then ceased altogether. At long intervals a Mexican would ride in with a report that he had seen the White Devil in some canyon among the hills. Even these reports ceased, and few Americans of the latter days in California had heard of him until the freight train killed the white horse. The Mexicans came for miles to look at him. All of them knew him, at least they said so, and they respected him sufficiently to look at his dead body from a distance.

When he was dragged from beneath the engine by the trainmen a horse doctor looked at him. He was a magnificent animal even in death, and the veterinarian said that he had been stone blind for years.

Vasquez' death is history; the story of the White Devil is a Mexican superstition.—Detroit Free Press.

THE LEGEND OF NEW RIVER.

New Water Came in the Desert After a Child's Prayer.

In the early fifties a party of emigrants on their way to the gold fields of California by the southern route, via the Gila river, crossed the Colorado by the ferry left by Graham in 1848 "and struck out on the desert for the land of promise. The trail was well defined by abandoned wagons and the bones of horses, mules and human beings. Struggling through the yielding sand, the thermometer at 130 degrees, wheels falling apart, animals dying from heat and thirst, they on the second night halted some ten miles from "Cooke's Well," with the water in their kegs exhausted.

Tradition states that a little ten-year old girl was heard praying, in one of the wagons, for water. It states that in her child-like faith she said: "O good Heavenly Father, I know that I have been a very naughty, naughty girl, but, oh dear, I am so very thirsty and mamma, papa and the baby all want to drink so much. Do, good God, give us water, and I will never, never be naughty again."

The gaunt, half-starved, desperate men gathered around the wagon, discussing how and what movement to make to save their lives and their dear ones, with no thought of gold now, and listened to the humble petition. One voiced the rest and said: "May God grant it!" Soon the voice of the little child, in cheerful accent, sounded clear in the silent night. "O mother, mother, get me water; oh, I can hear it running; oh, do get some for baby and me." They thought her delirious from her sufferings, when suddenly a babel of sounds broke forth from the oxen and mules, all frantic and endeavoring to break loose from the wagon poles.

A rustling noise called their attention to a slight depression near the wagons, and on investigating the cause they found water gushing up out of the sand, sweet, clear, but warm. Their sufferings were over, and they reached the mines better and wiser for this interposition, as they firmly believed, of Divine Providence.

This spring continued to flow running due north for twenty miles, then was lost in the sand. In places it was over two miles wide and from four to twenty feet deep. When immigration in 1851 moved by the isthmus and the northern route, the miraculous water disappeared, and its divine work done. But the memory of the "New river," that was caused by a sand bar below Yuma, will long be remembered by survivors of the thousands benefited by it in 1850-51.—Hartford Courant.

Red Taps.

Once, in the foreign office, a new chief was taking possession of his room, and he came face to face with a soldier, pacing the passage. He marveled because the guard gave the word: "Keep to the left." "Why do you say 'Keep to the left'?" "I don't know." The statesman investigated the singular affair, and after not a little trouble, a clew was found and followed.

Fifty years before, the passage had been painted, and an orderly had stamped it with orders to bid every one to "Keep to the left," and avoid the wet paint. This order had stood unchanged and practically unquestioned for a term of fifty years.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

The Family Honor.

A Detroit boy has a military suit with shining brass buttons. In his family lives an old colored woman who is a great stickler for "de honah" of the house.

An old servant who belongs to another Detroit house is aunty's ohum, but the two quarrel bitterly over the merits of their respective houses and tell wonderful tales to support their statements.

Aunty was lately asked by her old friend if "dem shinin' buttons" on Master Bobby's regimentals were real.

"Laws sakes, chile," she answered, "did yeh suppose dey was brass? Dey's real enough, suah—real solid gold, ebbery one of 'em."—Detroit Free Press.

A Doubtful Story.

A Norwegian living in the sixteenth century was accounted a masterhand at minute contrivances. In proof of this it is recorded that he made sixteen thousand dishes of turned ivory, in every respect without a flaw, and so tiny that all of them could be safely cradled in an empty pepper-corn cup of usual size. One may well believe that, as was written in connection, "magnifying-glasses were essential to full life and enjoyment of the Lilliputian show;" it is added that the fairy-like workmanship was the admiration of many learned men.—Harper's Bazar.

A Few Fashion Notes.

Sealskin coats will be worn next winter in fashionable sea lion society.

Eight-ounce gloves are still in vogue among artists. Undressed kids are often seen in poorer quarters.

The summer girl will be much worn in August and September.

The summer young man will wear mittens in the fall.

It is not deemed good taste for a young man to shoot his brunette sweetheart with a blue-barreled pistol. Blue is for blondes.—Detroit Free Press.

Thomas Lawless.

THOMAS LAWLESS is in a St. Louis hospital on account of a battering he got while trying to save a young girl from insult by a couple of rowdies, and James Thoroughgood has been sentenced to death in Delaware for felony.

FEMININE FADS AND FOIBLES.

THE latest fad in Seattle, Wash., is paper hats for ladies. They are made in various styles, and, being usually pretty and showy and costing only a few cents each, are apt to become quite popular.

A DECIDEDLY novel idea in jewelry is that of signatures in gold. Handsome lace-pins are made out of thin sheet gold, the design of which is the signature of the fair one by whom the brooch is worn.

FESTOONS of flowers tied with ribbons are used on lamps and candle-stands as a table decoration. According to the scheme of decoration field flowers, grasses and daisies, pansies or roses are employed.

THE latest caprice for evening wear, and for some day wear, too, is to have the gown, shoes, hose and gloves match. For gloves all are in high favor for evening and are imported in all the delicate shades.

A BRAND new wheelbarrow loaded full of flowering plants makes an effective lawn ornament for country houses and apparently thousands of householders came to that conclusion simultaneously this summer for nearly all the suburbs display such wheelbarrows plentifully.

INDUSTRIAL ADVANCEMENT.

IN St. Paul a company makes a business of cleaning and inspecting chimneys, and of finding the cause of bad drafts in chimneys.

MONSTER turtles are so abundant in Magdalena bay, Lower California, that a company has gone into the business of canning the extract for exportation.

MISSOURI is outstripping Kentucky in the stock-raising business. Formerly the best horses and mules came from Kentucky, but now the best stock is raised in Missouri.

THE report of the American Iron and Steel association shows that for the first time the product of the United States in iron and steel last year exceeded that of the United Kingdom.

Six of the largest marble columns ever produced in this country have been made by a firm in Rutland, Vt., for use in the new hall at Princeton. They are over nineteen feet long, and are a trifle more than three feet in diameter.

IT is said that the mining output in Colorado this year will exceed anything ever known in the history of the state. The snows on the mountains will furnish plenty of water for the gold placers this summer, and the silver deposits are rapidly being developed.

UNPLEASANT SITUATIONS.

A HOUSE-BREAKER in Kalamazoo, Mich., was almost captured because of his foolishness in using a parlor match to light his way, the noise attendant upon striking the match awakening a sleeper in the room.

THE Oldtown Indians in Maine have a law that forbids palefaces to be on their island later than a certain hour in the evening. A white man who remained until past the hour recently took a swim in his clothes to the main land rather than fall into the clutches of the red constable.

LOW-NECKED dresses were condemned in a sermon by a Providence clergyman and he pointedly referred to his wife as being an incorrigible sinner in this respect, as she insisted on wearing them, despite his frequent objections. She has begun a suit for divorce for being thus publicly pilloried.

A TEN-YEAR-OLD boy in an Arkansas town has been detected in stealing letters from a post-office box by means of a string and a grasshopper. The grasshopper was tied to the string and let down into the box through the aperture. When the insect got a letter in its pincers he hauled it up and took the letter.

SOME SUPERLATIVES.

A ROSE cultivated in Philadelphia measured seventeen inches in width.

SOUTH DAKOTA has now the largest artesian well in the world. It shoots water 140 feet from the surface.

TWELVE oranges which grew on a twig six inches long in George Stone's grove near De Land, Fla., completely filled a peck measure and weighed thirty-five pounds.

A FORT WORTH (Tex.) man says that he has the largest madstone in the world. It is nearly as large as a baseball and was taken, he says, by his father from the stomach of a white deer, found dead in the Ozark mountains.

THERE are three artesian wells located almost on a line within a running distance of 3,000 feet in Sonoma, Cal., which yield between 3,000,000 and 3,000,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours. A subterranean stream runs beneath the town.

THERE is a vast bed of pure rock salt in the Colorado desert, and the Southern Pacific railroad, in laying their tracks to the salt mines, crossed a point where for 3,000 feet they had to make a pile and ballast the track with lamps of pure salt crystals.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—The Supreme Court of this State, in a Fresno county equity case, has rendered an important decision in regard to the practice in equity cases. The Superior Judge of Fresno county totally ignored the findings of the jury before whom the case was tried and went on with the case after a jury had rendered a verdict, and rendered his decision contrary to that of the jury. The Supreme Court says: "It was the verdict of a jury placed in the box to try the cause, and it cannot be disregarded until set aside and vacated by the Court." "A new trial should have been ordered. Much is necessarily the law, for if it were otherwise, parties would be deprived of their right to a trial jury."

"When the court set aside and vacated the verdict it was its duty to order a new trial. It had no power to proceed to determine the cause, 'as the court cannot enter a verdict contrary to the will of the jury,' so it cannot substitute its judgment for theirs and assume the power to decide the issues of fact once submitted to the jury."

"We therefore conclude that the verdict was set aside and vacated by the court and that the court had no power to proceed and determine the cause, but should have ordered a new trial."

"Cockaigne," the Argonaut's noted London correspondent, discusses the Englishman's and his fascinations for the American girl in the Argonaut of September 28th. "Cockaigne's" letter in reply to the statement made by a New York girl—quoted by "Van Ghyse" in the Argonaut of some weeks ago—that Englishmen converse better and are more courteous than American men, a statement which "Cockaigne" denies with much show of reason.

DEATH OF BALMACEDA.

Ex-President Balmaceda, of Chili, committed suicide at his room at the Argentine Legation, Santiago, on Saturday morning last by shooting himself through the temple. The news of the death of the Dictator was received with great joy in Valparaiso. In the evening the city was brilliantly illuminated. The story of his escape to the cruiser San Francisco disguised as a drunken sailor was a lie, as have been more than half the accounts we have had from Chili. The night previous to his suicide Balmaceda had a consultation with a relative in regard to surrendering himself to the Junta, and at 8 o'clock next morning a shot was heard in his room, and on breaking open his door he was found on his bed undressed and dead, but the body was warm. He left a letter, accusing his Generals of having been false to him. He wanted to make Chili the first Republic of America, and rescue it from foreign domination. He had been accused of things he had never sanctioned, but which were done contrary to his wishes. The taking of his own life saved him from a terrible death at the hands of his enemies, had he been captured. It would have been better for Chili had he done this deed months sooner than he did. The world is better off without such men.

The will of the late Mrs. Theresa Fair was read recently to members of the family. The estate is valued at between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 and the bulk of it is left to the two daughters, Mrs. Herman Oelrich and Virginia Fair. The two sons, Charles and James Fair Jr., are left $500,000 each. The estate is left in trust to John W. Mackay and R. V. Day for the benefit of Mrs. Fair's four children. After the bequests are paid the rest of the estate will be divided equally between the two daughters; $1,500,000 will be paid each of the daughters when they reach the age of 25 and in the meantime they will receive $500 each a month. The boys will receive $500 a month each until Charles is 35 and James 30, when the full bequest will be paid over to them.

Will S. Green, the popular editor of the Colusa Sun, while attending the recent Irrigation Convention at Salt Lake City, surprised everybody by taking out himself a wife, Miss Sallie B. Morgan, who came over from Mississippi to join her fortunes with California's distinguished editor. All who know Will S. Green will wish him and his bride all the happiness imaginable.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Weinstock, Lubin & Co.—Sacramento. Application for Patent—Lookout Mine, and Sweetwater Mill Site. Corner's Sale—Rattlesnake Mine. Estate of Clark Eggleston, Deceased—Order to Show Cause why Real Estate should not be sold.

RELIGIOUS.—Rev. T. Lloyd Bradley will hold services at the School House to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock. All are cordially invited to attend.

Personal.

W. H. Metson, of Reddy, Campbell & Metson, San Francisco, arrived here on Saturday last, by Gelati's stage, to look after some legal business in the Superior Court.

J. Sturgeon was over from Mono Lake the first of the week.

Mrs. J. J. Welch, and Miss Maud Reading were over from Bodie a few days and returned on Monday morning. This was Miss Reading's first visit to Bridgeport since her return from Europe.

A. F. Bryant, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Harridan, of Boston, and Mrs. W. Seaborn, of San Francisco, Mrs. Bryant's sister, and C. B. Silkman, of San Francisco, arrived about noon on Saturday from San Francisco.

J. E. Lane, an assayer connected with the Selby Works, of San Francisco, arrived on Gelati's stage on last Saturday evening. He is assaying at the Dunderberg mine.

Mrs. Adeline Eggleston was up from Antelope this week.

Jo. Hunt and W. Radley were in from Antelope on Wednesday.

Mrs. A. S. Montrose was over from Bodie on Thursday, returning home yesterday. Archie Mathewson, of Bodie, came over on Thursday and returned yesterday.

Deputy Sheriff Crowell landed Robert Biggs at the Napa Asylum without any trouble.

Hon. T. B. Riekey arrived from Antelope last evening.

THE DUNDERBERG MINE.—Work is progressing in this mine to determine the ore extent, and a building has been erected for an assay office, which is in charge of J. E. Lane, of San Francisco, who is here in the interest of prospective purchasers. A carload of good-looking ore has been taken out and it is said that 600 car loads can be taken out in short order. Mr. Lane and C. B. Silkman, of San Francisco, will give the ore from every part of the mine a thorough testing as to its value and the proper way to work the ore. These gentlemen are favorably impressed with the mine, and the only trouble is in regard to the best process for reducing the ore, and their report to headquarters will settle the question as to the sale of the mine.

FREIGHTS.—Teamsters are now rushing goods into the county. Russell's big team arrived on Wednesday and immediately returned to Carson for another load for our merchants. Dotah's teams left early in the week for Carson, and on Thursday May's two big teams, each with three wagons passed through town, and yesterday Wash P. Brandon left here for Carson on the same errand. Our merchants propose to lay in stocks this fall that will carry them through the winter.

WINE DINNER.—Norm and Mose Hutton gave a wine dinner to the sheep shearers, who have been at work at the Hutton ranch for several weeks, on Tuesday afternoon, the shearing having been completed. The table was loaded with all the goodies Mrs. Norm Hutton could think of to please the appetite of man, and thirty-five seated around the festive board had an enjoyable time, as all do who visit the Huttons.

TO BE REMOVED.—The remains of the late A. S. Montrose, who was killed in Bodie about two years ago, by the explosion of the Goodson boiler, which also killed Dr. Goodson, will soon be removed to Bridgeport, Mr. Montrose having expressed a wish to be buried here. The remains of their child will also be removed to this place.

HEAVY LOSS.—Sewell Knapp, cousin of District Attorney H. M. Eddy, of this place, and S. Knapp, of Hawthorne, Nev., a few days since had his barn, 60x200 feet, containing 400 tons of hay, etc., destroyed by fire on his ranch near Snohomish, Wash. Loss $7,000. The fire was caused by spontaneous combustion of the hay.

PREPARE.—Prepare for winter, and make up your mind it will be a rough one, so lay in plenty of wood, chicken feed, hay, barley, etc., which you cannot obtain at the stores, and it would be well to give our storekeepers orders for your winter's provisions, which they will sell you low for cash.

SETTLED.—The weather the first of the week was decidedly rough—cold and blustery, but it has settled down to pleasant weather again.

WILL MEET.—The Board of Supervisors will meet in regular session on next Monday.

Who would ask for a profligate day than this?

Monday, Sept. 21. Geo. Pettigrew admitted to citizenship—H. L. Leavitt and P. G. Hughes, witnesses.

Tuesday, Sept. 22. M. J. Cody vs A. E. Bean, et al.—All the proceedings in this case had subsequent to Decree of Sale set aside.

Wednesday, Sept. 23. M. J. Cody vs A. E. Bean et al.—Order of Sale of mortgaged property ordered.

Estate of Bridget Hubbard, deceased—A. A. Travis appointed Administrator and bond for $1,000 filed, Letters issued. R. T. Pierce, J. W. E. Townsend and William Stewart appointed Appraisers. Notice to Creditors ordered published in Homer Mining Index.

John Schlemmer vs. J. W. Jones—Decree for Plaintiff.

Estate of Clark Eggleston, deceased. Return of sale of personal property, and present condition of estate filed, and hearing fixed Nov. 9th. Decree setting apart homestead for the widow. Petition for sale of real estate filed, and notice to show cause why the same should not be granted ordered published in Oronozima-Union. Hearing of same set for Nov. 9th.

Friday, Sept. 25. Estate of A. S. Montrose, deceased. Order and Decree setting aside to widow and children the whole estate, and bondmen discharged.

Estate of W. Mooney, deceased. Hearing of final account continued to Sept. 26, at 2 P. M.

To KILL CARPET MOTHS.—Saturate a large cloth with water strongly impregnated with ammonia. After wringing it as dry as possible, spread upon the carpet and iron until thoroughly dry. It is not advisable to press hard, as that flattens the nap of the carpet. Go over the entire carpet in this manner. The steam not only kills the little pests and destroys their eggs, but with the addition of ammonia freshens and brightens the carpet also. To avoid carpet moths: If you find an appearance of moths in your carpets, use an "ounce of prevention." In other words, after your carpet has been laid sponge thoroughly in a strong solution of salt and water. It is well, also, to sprinkle salt underneath the carpet, in dark corners, under bookcases, couches, etc., where the carpet is least used. Above all, keep your rooms sufficiently light, remembering that moths should be numbered among those wicked creatures who "prefer darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil."—Boston Journal of Commerce.

INDIVIDUAL CHECKS.—Dealers in using checks should bear in mind certain rules which will prevent possible loss. It is a legal principle that in case of loss through carelessness or negligence, the loss must be born by the careless party. In sending bank drafts, always have them made payable to yourself and indorse them on the back, pay to John Jones & Co., or order, and not have them made payable directly to John Jones & Co. There are two reasons for this. If the draft is lost, a duplicate can be produced and payment stopped on the first one more readily; and, secondly the draft will show that you have paid the money, and in case of any difficulty in regard to payment, it would be available as a receipt. If remittance is made by your own check, do not make it payable to John Jones & Co., or bearer, or to yourself, and then indorse it in blank, but make it directly payable to John Jones & Co. or order. This renders an identification necessary, or that it should be indorsed by them and collected.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"I don't want any castor oil," said a sick little Boston boy, petulantly. "Why, Horace," expostulated his mother, "don't you know that castor oil is made from beans?" and the little boy, whose faith in his mother is perfect, took the dose, and feebly asked for more.—The Independent.

Hot milk is recommended by a medical journal as an excellent substitute for beer, whiskey, or other alcoholic stimulants in cases of great fatigue and over exertion of body and mind. Its reviving influence, when taken as hot as it can be sipped, is remarkable. Its effect is promptly felt and lasting.

A MYSTERY.

How the human system ever recovers from the bad effects of the nauseous medicines often literally poured into it for the supposed relief of dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism and other ailments, is a mystery. The mischief done by bad medicine is scarcely less than that caused by disease. If they who are weak, bilious, dyspeptic, constipated, or rheumatic, would often be guided by the experience of invalids who have thoroughly tested Rosette's Stomach Bitters, they would in every instance obtain the speediest aid derivable from rational medication. This medicine is a powerful, derived from vegetable sources, and possessing, in consequence of its basis of pure spirits, properties as a medicinal stimulant not to be found in the fiery local bitters and stimulants often resorted to by the debilitated, dyspeptic and languid.

MARRIAGE.

TRAVIS-MONTROSE.—In Lundy, September 23d, by Rev. T. Lloyd Bradley, Ward C. Travis to Miss Lois V. Montrose, both of that place.

WEDDING.—A wedding was held by John C. Goodson, Sept. 21st, at 10 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. J. W. E. Townsend, in the city of San Francisco. The bride, Miss Lois V. Montrose, was accompanied by her father and mother, and the groom, Ward C. Travis, was accompanied by his father and mother. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. Lloyd Bradley, and the wedding was a most successful one. The bride and groom were united in the presence of many friends and relatives, and the celebration was a most enjoyable one.

A HANDSOME BOOK.

The new Fall and Winter Illustrated Catalogue of Weinstock, Lubin & Co., Sacramento, California, which is sent free to any address, far surpasses all their previous price-lists in beauty, volume, and interesting matter. It contains one hundred and sixty pages, printed in the best style on fine paper, and with hundreds of beautiful illustrations, made especially for this edition, and showing accurately the best of new styles in goods for men, women, and children. Each page reveals some new surprise and shows how profitable is Mail Order Shopping.

The following will give some clue as to the general drift of the book:—

CLOAKS AND SUITS.—Seventy pages of artistic drawings by first-class artists tell the story of the fall styles in ladies' and children's suits, wraps, and capes. We do not believe that ever before has any such collection of choice new goods been offered the people of the Pacific coast at any such prices as will be found marked beneath the various illustrations.

MILLINERY.—Eighteen handsome illustrations of hats and bonnets after Eastern and Parisian fashions are shown, besides liberal representations of birds' and feathers, trimmed shapes, baby caps, etc. It is worth the trouble of sending for the catalogue, if for nothing else than to see the new fashions in this most changeable of all lines of wearing apparel.

FANCY GOODS.—Twenty-five pages are devoted to underwear, neckwear, ribbons, purses, and countless other accessories of the wardrobe and toilet of the modern maid and maiden.

WOOLENS, SILKS, COTTONS.—These, too, are catalogued in great assortment, but of nearly everything we find additional, and samples if asked for. Blankets, table linens, towels, etc., are also described on these pages.

MEN'S GOODS.—The men folks have not been forgotten. A large part of the book is devoted to the prices and descriptions of the new things for them. The great $2.50 pants, the $10 and $15 business suits, the 50c shirt, and many other specialties, are described at length. Telling values are also offered in soft and stiff felt hats, underwear, neckwear, hosiery, etc.

SHOES.—For men, women and children, and for people who want our a, stout goods, medium goods, or fine goods, but in every case the very best value possible for the money.

TOILET AND HOUSEHOLD SUPPLIES.—Many pages are devoted to the thousand and one things in "Notions," Stationery, Smokers' Articles, Soaps, Perfumes, Embroidery Materials, Carpets, Curtains, Rugs, Window Shades, etc.

SILVERWARE AND JEWELRY.—Twelve pages tell the story of new jewelry, silverware, watches in nickel, silver, gold-filled, and solid gold, as well as fully described and illustrated.

BOOKS.—Brief but accurate descriptions are given of hundreds of new books for adults and children. Also of bibles, dictionaries, almanacs, scrap and autograph albums, Christmas cards, or booklets, etc. The prices will be apt to be a revelation to those who have been buying books elsewhere.

TOYS.—Under this head are a dozen or more of attractive pages as we could devise. In themselves they form a book which the children will delight to look over by the hour. This year a buyer went to Europe for us to purchase many of our toys, so that nearly everything in these pages will be found new and fresh.

AS A WHOLE.—The book is nearly 10x12 inches in size, one hundred and sixty pages, beautiful cover, and gives full directions, so that even a child may order whatever it fancies. The book is sent free, on application, to any address, and is valuable and interesting to have whether one cares to use it in buying goods or not.

WHOLESALE BUTCHERY

A Story of the Bloody Deeds of Two Brothers.

They Vowed Vengeance Upon Confederate Desecrators and Heroes of Death Told of Their Deeds.

New Holland, Cal., there is a little swamp near the road. At its edge stands a large white oak tree. Years ago this spot was often pointed out as the scene of the murder of twelve men, and the place bore the reputation of being haunted. It was said the rattling of chains and groans and prayers for mercy could be distinctly heard by passersby. No one ever stopped to investigate, as we can testify from personal experience, says a writer in the New York Dispatch, having heard the groans some fourteen years ago, and having also done some of the most distinguished traveling in all our eventful career.

But to the story: Howard Thompson was a witness to the killing, which occurred in 1863, he being ten years old at the time. The killing was done by Bob and Ben Jordan, of Placerville county, and the murdered men were deserters who had been arrested in Gilmer county.

While the Jordan boys were in the confederate army a crowd of deserters visited the house of their father, assaulted their sister and the wife of Bob Jordan and carried their father, who was about seventy years old, through the mountains a distance of sixty miles, and subjected him to many shocking cruelties. Then the Jordan boys returned home and began their record of killing. Every man known to be a deserter or a skulker became a victim of their unerring rifles. Bob kept a list of the names and dates in a small book. He was pursued one day and in crossing a river lost his book. It contained one hundred and twenty-five names. After that he kept no record. This was before the killing near Gainesville.

Bob and Ben Jordan became recruiting officers and arrested twenty-six men in Gilmer county, and started with them to the front. On the way two escaped and twenty-four were lodged in Gainesville jail. Next morning the Jordans picked out twelve whom they had the best reason to believe had been implicated in the outrages upon their family and chained them together and marched them to this white oak tree on the New Holland road. They stood them up in a row and Bob Jordan marched slowly along the line with a large army pistol and shot them with his own hand one at a time. Some fell on their knees and prayed, while others looked their slayer square in the face and died with an oath on their lips. Among the number was a fragile boy about fifteen who was chained to a very large man.

The boy was shot first and the man supported him in a standing posture until he himself was shot, when they fell to the ground together.

Those twelve men were hastily buried in a trench, dug upon the spot, but after the war they were exhumed by the federal authorities and removed to the national cemetery at Chattanooga.

After the war Bob Jordan was shot to death in Florida by a weak, sickly young man upon whom he was imposing. Ben was stabbed to death in a barroom in Texas.

The spot where the killing occurred is now in cultivation, but the old tree still remains. The land is part of the tract which Tom Daniels bought about two years ago for eighteen hundred dollars and sold a few days ago for six thousand dollars.

STORY OF A DIAMOND.

It Was Obtained by a Surgeon from a Brazilian by Sharp Practice.

A rare diamond, weighing nearly four carats, now in New York, has a remarkable history. It was found, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch, in the gold district of Brazil by a native who did not know its value, but kept it as a "luck" stone. One day while journeying to a camp of traders with his gold dust he was bitten by a serpent. Applying the antidote known to the people of that country, he proceeded on his way, but had not gone far when he was again bitten. He treated himself for the second wound and continued on his journey. While stooping to drink from a brook the fangs of a snake were fastened in the bag which contained the stone. On reaching the camp he was found to be succumbing rapidly to the effects of the venom, and when questioned by the camp surgeon told how the snake had seized the bag at his throat.

The surgeon was permitted to see the stone, and, suspecting its real character, he told the native that it was extremely dangerous to have it about him, as it attracted venomous reptiles, and advised him to sink it in the neighboring brook. The superstitious finder of the diamond acted upon the suggestion, and the covetous surgeon, having watched the proceeding, availed himself of the first opportunity to fish the gem from its hiding-place. The diamond was purchased recently from the cutter in Europe by Edwin A. Thrall, of New York.

Women in Russia.

Russia, so far behind other countries in Europe in other respects, is at all events in advance as regards its treatment of women, of which there is just now another illustration. By imperial ukase it has been settled that in future women physicians may practice everywhere within the Russian empire, provided they wear a badge supplied by the crown, indicative of their calling. Moreover, women are to enjoy special privileges on practicing in female hospitals, as well as charitable institutions, gymnasia and schools for young women. Finally, the ukase lays down special regulations for the appearance and giving evidence in court of female physicians, so that womanly modesty shall not be outraged by some impudent cross-examiner.

BRAZIL'S NEW IMMIGRANTS.

Large Numbers Are Prosperous and Contented.

There are satisfactory reports from Rio de Janeiro about the condition of the one hundred thousand Italian, Polish, German and Hebrew immigrants who have settled in Brazil within the last two or three years. They are exceedingly well treated by the authorities and the new republic, and by the native citizens of localities in which they may be pleased to take up their abode. Those of them who desire land have no difficulty in procuring it, and those who seek employment in the mines, or in trades, or at unskilled labor do not need to remain idle.

Such of the immigrants as have taken up the work of cultivating the soil, says the Chicago Tribune, find that they can raise many kinds of fruits and other natural products which they never saw in Europe; that the fertility of the soil surpasses the reports they had heard of it, and that the climate in many regions of the republic is entirely satisfactory to them. They find also that free public schools have been established by the central and provisional governments, and that a system of universal education will soon be adopted.

So favorable are the accounts that the immigrants have sent back to the countries whence they came that the Brazilian authorities look for a vast increase of immigration during the coming year, especially from Italy and Prussian Poland. The great landlords in the last-named country are alarmed by the flight of thousands of their laborers to Brazil, but there is no likelihood of the success of their efforts to prevent it. Italy can spare several millions of her people, who are sure to improve their condition by settlement in Brazil.

Furthermore, it is known that the rich Jew, Baron Hirsch, has offered to transport half a million Russian Jews to any part of the South American continent, and the probability is that Brazil will be the country chosen for them. The Brazilian government is doing all that it can do under the circumstances to encourage immigration, but it will do much more as soon as its affairs are in perfect order, so that the funds needed for the work can be appropriated.

SLANG AND ITS DERIVATIONS.

Facts Relating to the Origin of Certain Words and Phrases.

Within the present century (probably) a good many Hebrew words have come into English slang through the medium of "Yiddish," e. g., showful, (low Hebrew, "shaput"); pronounced thief, (Hebrew, "ganab"), pronounced "gonnof" by Polish Jews; Mr. Leland writes incorrectly "canef." The greater part says the Antiquarian, of the vocabulary of slang, however, is purely of English origin, consisting of humorously-metaphorical uses of ordinary words, the metaphor being often so far-fetched as to be of the nature of a riddle. Slang words of this type have often passed into standard use; the ordinary French words for "head," "cheek," "leg," for instance, represent the vulgar Latin words for "pot," "porringer," and "knee-cap."

Of course, a humorous metaphorical expression may acquire a considerable degree of proverbial currency without thereby becoming slang. It passes into slang when the original point of the joke is no longer distinctly remembered, and the expression continues to be used merely as an eccentric substitute for the recognized term. At a later stage sometimes the word or phrase has become so general that all its grotesque associations have disappeared, and it becomes a permanent addition to the resources of the literary language. A good example of these three stages of development may be found in the history of the word "budget," as denoting the financial proposals of the chancellor of the exchequer. In the reign of George II. the word was used with conscious allusion to the celebrated pamphlet which ridiculed Sir R. Walpole as a conjurer, opening his "budget" or "bag of tricks." Afterward it must, for a time, have been current as slang; but, as it supplied a want, it was soon taken into the ordinary vocabulary, and at the present time a chancellor of the exchequer would, as a matter of course, speak of his own "budget" without any thought of the uncomplimentary sense which the word originally expressed.

FEIGNED HYSTERICS.

How a Woman Made Money by Getting Hysterical Fits in Depots.

"What's the matter with the lady?" inquired a Pittsburgh Dispatch reporter of a physician who was working with a woman at the Union depot yesterday. She was lying on one of the benches, and apparently had had a fainting spell. "Oh, she has had a hysterical fit," he replied carelessly. "She is all right, and nobody need be worried about her. This woman may be all right, but I have my doubts about it. I had hard work trying to open her eyelids, and she evidently held them. It is an old rag, you know, of some women, to faint in public places, where they can excite sympathy and have a collection taken. I know of one who used to have hysterical spells with great regularity at hotels and depots. Invariably money was collected for her benefit, and she walked off with the stuff, only to faint away again in another public place. She always had a pathetic tale to tell, and it took the police a good while before they tumbled to her swindling game. It is an easy matter for a woman to become hysterical, and they can bring on the fit when they feel like it."

Two-Dollar Counterfeits.

The ways of the wicked are most always found out at the last. The counterfeiters of the United States two-dollar silver certificate forgot to turn the letters two after photographing the bill and making it otherwise so like the genuine note that it deceived the best experts for awhile. The letters on the counterfeit read backward: o w r. They are on the top of the figure 2, and are so minute as to require a magnifying glass to be visible.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Ever since the establishment of the first paper on the bay of San Francisco, which we believe was the "Atlas," removed from Monterey in 1860, the inhabitants of the Coast generally have been interested in the news from San Francisco. The "Atlas," like many other pioneers of '49, has succumbed to the inevitable and gone over to the great majority, and, like other pioneers, has been succeeded by younger generations. The "Examiner" has taken perhaps the most prominent place in the newspaper field of late years, and its weekly edition is very generally taken by those who want an interesting and reliable paper published at "The Bay." Everyone is familiar with the Premiums made by Mr. Hearst, the "Examiner's" enterprising publisher, and it is only necessary to say that this year the aggregate value of the premiums—of which there are 5,000—$435,000, which are distributed among all the subscribers to the paper. In addition to these premiums, which range in value from 50 cents to $7,500, every subscriber receives one of the four great premium pictures, which will be mailed to him in a tube direct from the "Examiner" office as soon as the subscription is received:

"The Retreat from Moscow," by Meissner.
"The Roman Chariot Race," by A. Wagner.

Each of these pictures is 21x28 inches, and they are elegantly reproduced in fac simile, showing every tint and color of the greatest original, either one of which could not be purchased for $100,000.

"Women and Children First," by C. Napier Henry
"Christ Leaving the Praetorium," by Gustave Doré

Each of these pictures is reproduced in photograph, size 21x28, and eminently fitted for framing, and will adorn the walls of the most refined home.

The subscription price of the "Weekly Examiner" is $1.50, and subscriptions may be sent either direct to W. H. Hearst, Publisher, San Francisco, through the Local Agent of the "Examiner" or the Postmaster.
